Charlie Brown specials to air on TV, after all, in PBS deal

Recently, Apple, who had bought the rights to Charlie Brown, announced that it would not be airing on TV this year. This caused a wave of public backlash, which prompted a change. In response, Apple recently announced that the Thanksgiving and Christmas specials would be aired this year. This is upon their original plan to have it free on their Apple TV+ platform for a three-day window.

- Who just got back on TV? Charlie Brown
- Charlie Brown got put back on TV for which two holidays? Thanksgiving and Christmas

Bitcoin Hits $18K As Investors Anticipate ‘Shallow’ Pullback Before New Highs

Recently, Bitcoin hit $18k, a number that had not been reached since three years prior during the Bitcoin bubble. Analysts have predicted that there will be a slight decrease but another spike following that. It's estimated that during this spike prices could reach as high as 19k. The all time high was $19,763 in December of 2017, so predictions don't place it far off of creating a new record. However, it's impossible to say how the market will react and whether reaching the all time high will cause another drop.

- What high did Bitcoin reach recently? $18k
- Do analysts predict Bitcoin will fall drastically or continue to rise? Continue to rise
